

QUEENSLAND: Brisbane And The Sunshine Coast

EPISODE
FOUR

The Sunshine state of Queensland has long been popular with New Zealand holidaymakers, but Al Brown has set out to see what else this favourite destination has to offer in the fourth episode of the series, Dishing up Australia with Al Brown.

Hinterland Hideaway

Hidden on a hill in the lush Sunshine Coast hinterland lies a place that is part retreat, part luxury lodge. Spicers Clovelly Estate is an intimately unique hideaway, with 10 exclusive suites and the private 3 bedroom French Cottage.

Here you can dine in style, at the incredible Two Chef Hat restaurant "The Long Apron", where head chef Cameron Matthews also runs a cooking school so you can take home some lessons in luxury cuisine.

Feast Afloat

After picking up a car in the sunny state capital of Brisbane, Al headed off on the road less travelled just over an hour northward and into the Sunshine Hinterland. an hours With an average elevation of 450m, the cooler climate offers unique attractions in each of the different seasons and serves up some exceptional experiences for Al on his Queensland culinary quest. En route he catches up with kiwi chef, Philip Johnson who has carved a great name for himself in the capital with his two fabulous restaurants, Bistro One Eleven and E'cco, both of which are at the head of Brisbane's vibrant food scene. Further north Al stops in to the harbour town of Scarborough where he meets the locals aboard one of Morgans Seafood's trawlers and cooks up one of the regions icons – the mighty prawn!
